These laws were understood as mathematical, immutable, eternal and divine.10Hence, if God were to do a miracle in order to fulfill His will for creation, it would be a contradiction of Himself. It has been observed by many that Hume's understanding of natural laws also entails a commitment to determinism.

Miracles and Natural Law: Are They Compatible?

God's miracle most certainly violated natural laws, for it completely canceled the principle of conservation of angular momentum of rotating bodies—a fundamental law. In addition, the kinetic energy of a rotating body like the Earth could not just disappear. Where did it go?

Perspective Digest : Miracles and Natural Law

A miracle cannot be explained by the ordinary workings of natural law. In order for a miracle to occur there has to be an alteration, suspension, or superseding of natural law.

Miraculous Versus Divine Healing - Truth Magazine

God in the miracle (and in providence) intervenes in the chain of cause and effect that he put into effect when he set the world in operation -- what we term "natural law." When he does this obviously, for the purposes of identifying his Son and confirming his Word, it is a miracle.

Miracles and Providence - Gospel Gazette Online

No, divine law and natural law are not identical as such. Divine law is natural law, but natural law is not necessarily divine law. There are atheists who believe in natural law. Greek philosophers before Christ believed in natural law.

Natural law and divine miracle; the principle of ...

A miracle is an event which the forces of nature—including the natural powers of man—cannot of themselves produce, and which must, therefore, be referred to a supernatural agency (Fisher 1900, 9). A miracle is a divine operation that transcends what is normally perceived as natural law; it cannot be explained upon any natural basis.

What Does the Bible Say About Miracles? : Christian Courier

What is called a miracle is merely an event that exceeds the limits of human knowledge of natural law. (2) Spinoza maintains, in rationalist tradition, that a proof for the existence of God must be absolutely certain. But if events could occur to overthrow the laws of Nature, then nothing is certain, and we are reduced to scepticism.

Natural law in the Enlightenment and the modern era. Other Scholastic thinkers, including the Franciscan philosophers John Duns Scotus (1266–1308) and William of Ockham (c. 1285–1347/49) and the Spanish theologian Francisco Suárez (1548–1617), emphasized divine will instead of divine reason as the source of law. This “voluntarism” influenced the Roman Catholic jurisprudence of the ...

natural law | Definition, Theory, & Ethics | Britannica

Further, granted an uninterrupted natural dependence between all things and the absolute dominion of law of cause and effect, there can be no place for miracles, no hope for divine interference. “The new theology taught that God never acted immediately, that all his acts were bound by the logical, mutual, interdependence of natural things.
