narrator of Rafik Schami's The Calligrapher's Secret. He is ventriloquising Rami Arabi, father-in-law of Hamid Farsi, master calligrapher of mid-twentieth century Damascus. To the novel's very end, Hamid Farsi is a mystery impossible to gauge according to normal criteria of readerly ethics. The master calligrapher sacrifices himself

Review of The Calligrapher's Secret by Rafik Schami

Rafik Schami lives in Marnheim, Germany, with his family. The Calligrapher's Secret begins in April 1957 on an unusually hot morning when rumour spreads in the streets of Damascus that Noura, the beautiful wife of the famous and rich calligrapher Hamid Farsi, has run away.

Book Review: The Calligrapher's Secret by Rafik Schami

Reading this felt like strolling through a beautiful park, deep in conversation with a friend, without noticing the gradient. When you reach the top of the hill, you turn around to discover the whole city of Damascus spread out before you, full of thousands of lives, linked together in subtle patterns only visible from this birds-eye view.

The Calligrapher's Secret by Rafik Schami

Had Rafik Schami written the One Thousand and One Nights, it would be thrice as long. Schami is a compulsive story teller. Whenever he mentions a new person in his novels, another full story shoots on the side and blossoms under his pen.

Rafik Schami gives a great insight into the deep meaning and beauty of Arabic calligraphy and contrasts this with the resistance to and dangers of change within certain sections of Moslem society. In this area it seems that little has changed in the past 70 years and it did greatly help me understand more about Arab culture.

The novel The Calligrapher's Secret by Rafik Schami is a passionate love story involving an acclaimed calligrapher, his beautiful wife, and a lively young apprentice. The book is set in Damascus, Syria in the early to mid-1950s. The plot has more to do with political and religious intrigue and the factions that existed (and exist) in Syria in the 1950's than with calligraphy, but there are ...
